

Chapter V

Conclusion and Suggestions

Conclusion

From this research I can take the conclusion that the racism is one of all themes which appear in literary works or poems. The function of racism in poems is to share the fact of racism in America and the experiences of black people especially the author towards the discrimination against black people. Based on the data analysis and discussion, finally I conclude that there are 4 types of racism that used in Langston Hughes's poem namely individual prejudice, individual discrimination, institutional policies, and institutional.

Racism that mostly used in Langston Hughes is Individual Prejudice and Individual Discrimination. There are 5 poems that include in individual prejudice and individual discrimination. From 5 poems of individual prejudice tells the reader about the feeling of black people towards racism and the bad prejudice of white people against black people. The poems that used individual discrimination tell the reader about how white people always act badly towards them. There are just 1 poem that used institutional policy and institutional practice. In those poems tell about how the company or the institution give them the hard way. The bad discrimination always they got from white community and even the company.

From all of that we know the author want to share about his experience and the other black experience through his poems. The feelings and the action experience of black people can be seen through Langston Hughes poems. He put all of their experience through some of his literary works especially in poems.

Suggestion

After conducting this research, I would like to give some suggestions especially for English learner. Racism is important thing to learn in order to know the history of black people. By learning racism, the reader or the learners can be aware and more appreciate the black existence in this world. I hope they will understand the black people situation, do not take distance and befriend with them. We know that all people are same, there is nothing will be separate us. People just have the different culture, region, but actually we are one. So, I hope the English learner will realized it and will admit black people as the part of society.