Dewi Masjita Umar. 2014. "Abstention in Regional Election of Gorontalo Utara District (a Case Study of Elector in Atinggola Subdistrict) The principal supervisor was Dr. Jusdin Puluhulawa., SH, M.Si and co supervisor was Dr. Udin Hamim, S.Pd., SH, M.Si Skripsi, Department of Law and Social Sciences, Study Program of Civics Education, Faculty of Social Science, Universitas Negeri Gorontalo.

There research discussed about fundamental problem of how the development of abstention among people in Atinggola subdistrict to participate in regional election of North Gorontalo district is and factors to influence people tend to be abstention rather than voting at TPS is. The research applied qualitative approach which was frequently called naturalistic research. It was expected to answer problems in which they are required to be solved comprehensively toward providing conclusion within time and situation contexts.

Data of interview showed that the development of abstention was due to disappointment of political parties considering they were admitted to be incapable of providing change to people and people of were no satisfied toward local government and political party in Atinggola subdistrict. Secondary interview can be concluded that people partially tend to be abstention unintentionally due to technical issue such as being sick, low economy level encountered people to be dilemma yet financial affair can decrease people desire to participate in regional election of North Gorontalo district 2013 particularly in subdistrict of Atinggola. There was an assumption appeared due to preferential activity of producing beneficial outcome rather than depending themselves toward uncertain things. And, administrative issues were noted to occur regarding to listed voters from villagers in subdistrict of Atinggola and lack of socialization was from political parties.
