

CHAPTER V CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

Conclusion

Struggle has the relation with individuals. Struggle is an action of people to get their want or freedom. In this research, the researcher focused to find out the women struggle in the novel by Alice Walker in 1982 namely The Color Purple by using the feminist literary criticism approach.

The Color Purple is a novel which loads the problem of women in year 1982. In the novel described that the women as the second class in the society. As the second class, they always get the oppression and violation from the men. That was described from Celie and Nettie characters in the novel. Besides, the novel loads the Feminism Movements. The concept of feminism in that novel is Radical feminism movement. The movement of radical feminism in that novel described from Celie, Nettie, Sofia and Shug Avery struggle. Because of their struggle, they could get the happiness and whatever their wants such as education, wealth, and love who ever their wants eventhouh with a same sex.

In sum, although the strength of male's world and its ideology of patriarchy seems stronger than any other enemy for women. It is undeniable duty for women to give their best struggle to fight it. The results of struggle are not the main points but the more important is the struggle itself.

Suggestion

The color purple is a good novel to become as the object of literary criticism especially to make an analysis about the women position in the literary work. Furthermore, there are many parts that can be analyzed in the novel such as the character, social classes, historical, etc. An analysis of literary work can give us the benefit such as we will know about the problem, the plot and etc in that novel. Besides, it can increase our knowledge about the literary work and literary criticism.

This research discusses about the role of women in the society, specifically about the women struggle to get their freedom. In the future, the researcher hopes that the next researcher will more focuses on another cases, such as politic or economic cases. Moreover, the background of the author's and the social culture also influence the problem there. Since women problem in society still happen and vary in different from of cases. This theme does not discuss yet in this research, so the researcher hopes that the next researcher will discuss it further. The essential problems have to discuss, because sometimes the implicit meaning of a problem gives more influence thing than the explicit one.
